I. INTRODUCTION

An MBA, or 'Master of Business Administration', is an elite qualification for business professionals. MBA courses focus on developing the leadership, initiative and individual excellence required for high-flying careers in management and entrepreneurship. For many professionals, getting an MBA seems like the next rational measure to extending their occupations.

A Master of Business Administration is a graduate grade concentrating on business management, investment surveillance. The core courses in an MBA program cover various areas of business management such as accounting, applied statistics, human resources, business communication, business ethics, business law, strategic management, business strategy, finance, managerial economics, management, entrepreneurship, marketing, supply-chain management, and operations management in a form most appropriate to management analysis and strategy. It conceived in the United States in the early 20th century when the country industrialized and companies strived scientific regime. Most programs also include elective lectures and engagements for additional study in a special area, for specimen, accounting, finance, marketing, and human resources. In general, MBA programs are structured around core procedures an effectively authoritative curriculum and elective studies that (may) authorize for a topic forte or engagement. Consequently, in the agenda's first year , pupils formulate both a working wisdom of oversight functions and the analytical knacks demanded for these, while in the second year (part), students seek elective courses, which may count towards a profession. The foremost school of business in the United States was The Wharton School of the University of Pennsylvania founded in 1881 through a contribution from Joseph Wharton.

Specialized MBA Programs

While MBA contenders can concentrate on one of the essence specializations of the degree, such as oversight or finance, many MBA programs allow students to develop engagements in specific industries. For example, an MBA student might specialize in sports management, entrepreneurship, the amusement business, or healthcare management.

Even within a management specialty, MBA degrees can allow a concentration on communication technology, hospitality, education, or criminal justice. Some MBA programs team up with various professional healthcare programs, such as nursing schools, to offer joint degrees.

Special Considerations

Specialized MBA programs are also unrestricted for students whose lives and careers do not authorize them to attend school full time. For example, executive MBA programs are designed for working specialists hoping to add to their certificates and capabilities. These courses of study generally organize courses for nights and weekends, sometimes also requiring short possession of intensive coursework.

Executive MBA programs are typically only open to prospects who already have considerable professional experience, and they thus preen to concentrate on more advanced cases such as administration development.

Analysis

Admission is equal to placement or not ?

The most important part about a B- school is placement. Because of the higher demand of the course in the corporate sector, many students do this with a dream of higher earnings and a good post in the reputed corporate company but it is not a cup of tea for every student or every B-School to get you placed. Most of the college's pledge 100% of placement opportunities while hovering a student to join their college but it doesn't mean that your assignment is fixed in your coveted company with joined that academy because occasionally it is more depends upon the personal interpretation in that individual field where you want to join a college at very first make you qualify for that domain and they try to teach you all the essential skills and make you ready as per the necessity of the corporate. But so many institutes failed to do this, as a result, the direct influence comes on the placement. As a survey in India, a total of only 7% of students get placed straightly after terminating their course this percentage is excluding the top 20 B -School of India. So you can assume what kind of concern is that because from 100% only a 7% of students are getting a good corporate job explicit after completing their course, what about remaining others? This kind of survey number explains all the false claims of 100% placement records of many institutions. So entrance is not a direct way to get a job or placement.

THE BENEFITS OF A ONLINE MBA PROGRAM

Quality

The MBA curriculum, faculty, and alumni networking of online programs run by top universities, at least, are comparable to their on-campus counterparts.

The identical instructors draw from the same curriculum as that of on-campus course, and so undersized is lost by way of grade of courses and teaching

Flexibility

If you're regarding an online MBA, probabilities are you're hovering work and family responsibilities, while still preserving an eye on your future. Because most online MBA programs offer a assortment of synchronous

Cost-saving

Another benefit of online MBA is that applicants who wouldn't have been able to attend the standard, full-time programs at top-notch MBA schools because of the high tuition can participate in the online structure of these academies.

II. CONCLUSION

Hence from the above discussion we get a clear idea about on-campus MBA & online MBA so from the total analysis of both the type of MBA we can said that Both the MBa are effective with their own certain limitation . Neither all the offline MBA nor all the online MBA are good or bad it is varies with different institutions and different way of teaching . Mainly online MBA is a oppertunity for those who wants to do MBA and want to achieve their higher goals but some how not able to manage the time to do MBA or for some of them financial condition is a major obstacles for doing MBA but online MBA providing them to do MBA by lesser cost as compared to Offline MBA, where the average cost of offline MBA is 5.5 to 6 lakh and the average cost of online MBA in India is around 3.5 lakh which is half of the fees of offline MBA. Now most of the management institute trying to add both the offline and online MBA options in their institute because of the growing demand of online and offline MBA . When some one choose MBA the main focus of the individual is to be corporate ready when the individual passed out from the institutions but there is a difference between students of offline MBA and online MBA because the life of on campus MBA and the life of online MBA where they do MBA with out any physical presence they miss a lot of corporate training experience which is much more needed in a corporate sector
